Broad in scope, meticulously researched, and including titles that have long been inaccessible, this resource is an overview of the history of the genre from its beginning to the present."--BOOK JACKET.

Herschel Baker, the new sheriff of Yellowstone County, Montana, must solve a dangerous mystery involving one lead-laden corpse, a large sum of missing cash, and a cattle rustler, which leads him to Thurman Baker, a robber, shootist, brigand for hire--and Herschel's father. Original.

Includes the decisions of the Supreme Courts of Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Texas, and Court of Appeals of Kentucky; Aug./Dec. 1886-May/Aug. 1892, Court of Appeals of Texas; Aug. 1892/Feb. 1893-Jan./Feb. 1928, Courts of Civil and Criminal Appeals of Texas; Apr./June 1896-Aug./Nov. 1907, Court of Appeals of Indian Territory; May/June 1927-Jan./Feb. 1928, Courts of Appeals of Missouri and Commission of Appeals of Texas.

Former Chicago police officer, now Private Detective Johnny Sundown, is approached by another power wielder to help locate his missing brother, hiding somewhere in the mean streets of Chicago. As they search Johnny begins to realize this magician is unlike any he has ever before encountered. Entirely self-taught and able to use powers beyond anything Johnny can understand, this mysterious client is one of thirteen brothers who need to reunite after a lifetime apart, in order to face some approaching danger which might threaten not just their family, but the fate of all mankind. Because something is coming, and whatever it might be, no one, not even Johnny himself, can turn it back. It will take a God to confront and defeat. Maybe a family of Gods.

Based on a true tale from the early 1900s, this work of historical fiction gives life to murderer William Kleeman, a handsome young farmer from southwestern Minnesota who courts the beautiful Maud Petri. After a quick engagement and marriage, the couple produce four children and are joined by boarder Mary Snelling, who teaches at the country school across the road. This addictive story winds through many twists before ending in a deadly rampage that results in one of the most notorious ax murders in American history.

A tough kid with a heart of gold, Al "Bummy" Davis grew up in the streets of Brownsville, New York on the fringes of the Jewish mob during the 20's and 30's-thanks to his older brother, a feared racketeer. But as much as he resisted the underworld of Murder, Inc. by becoming a championship fighter and a Brownsville hero, he never did escape the Jewish Mob's shadow. Though he repeatedly stood up to mob kingpins, Bummy suffered a spectacular fall from grace as a result of a smear campaign by the press. Ron Ross' Bummy Davis vs. Murder, Inc. is not just about one Jewish boxer, his meteoric rise to fame, and victimization by the press. Bummy's life was intertwined with the Great Depression, the survival of the Brooklyn Jewish immigrant population during Prohibition, and the inevitable offshoot of Prohibition-Murder Inc., one of American history's most notorious band of killers. Ron Ross portrays an important historical time period, an enigmatic Jewish subculture, and the surprising juxtaposition of a generation of Jews and their talent for boxing. Bummy Davis vs. Murder, Inc. features a cast of colorful villains whom you'll love to hate, a boxing legend who was the unwitting pawn of fate, and the human drama of the boxing world. With his vivid, street-smart

Damon Runyonesque writing style, Ron Ross redeems a tragic hero who fought the pull of one of the most brutal groups of killers to grace the twentieth century.

With his mute adopted son in tow, Gordianus the Finder travels south of Rome to solve the murder of Marcus Crassus, Rome's wealthiest citizen, and to prevent the execution of Crassus's entire household of slaves. Reprint.

A roman a clef of the Saudi government--featuring Awali, Sultan Khureybit, Sultan Khazael, and Prince Fanar--indicts Arab monarchies and pleads for the Arab masses

Celebrate the North Fork with a Gift of Poetry Catching Sundown is a collection of poems about life on the Northfork of Long Island. The places are familiar Robins Island, Silver Beach, Main Street Southold The events are commonplace sunsets, weather, the ebb and flow of the tide... The actors are some of your favorite characters - herons, terns and horseshoe crabs... Poetry is the choreography of words and images to communicate a notable experience. Life on the North Fork is a notable experience.

IN THE SMALL TOWN OF SUNDOWN, there are hidden secrets waiting to be found. In their previous adventures the kids from Sundown discovered the little people in the mountain and answered the question "Are we alone in the Universe?" As their lives went back to normal, the kids created the Sundown Adventure Society. After looking for new adventures but finding none, the kids were ready to give up. That's when a strange new mystery presented itself and some of the kids began to investigate. The adventure divided them. Will their fears reunite them to solve a puzzle?

Forty years after the suicide of his best friend's father, a writer revisits the tragedy and tries to unravel the mystery behind one man's inexplicable actions on that icy January day in 1961. Through his own recollections and his fiction-sometimes impossible to separate-he attempts to make sense of a senseless act and, in the process, to examine his youth, his connection to his best friend, Gene, and the enigma of Marie, a beautiful girl whose heart once belonged to both of them and whose spell still lingers through the decades. Spare, haunting, lyrical, Sundown, Yellow Moon is a piercing study of love and betrayal, grief and desire, youth and remembrance. Larry Watson not only brings to life a distinct period in history but, most affectingly, reveals the interplay of memory, secrets, and the passage of time. Praise for Sundown, Yellow Moon: "Watson succeeds impressively, especially in deepening our understanding of first love." -Alan Cheuse, Chicago Tribune "A marvelous evocation of a time and place and of high school existence when it was considerably less ferocious than it is today . . . [Sundown, Yellow Moon] twitches aside the curtain to reveal the menace and mendacity lurking behind placid and mundane lives." -Minneapolis Star Tribune "[An] oddly heartbreaking story: allowed to run amok, the past becomes a monster capable of devouring the present." -Booklist "Larry Watson takes the less-traveled roads, through landscapes and heartscapes vaguely familiar, intensely poetic and always jangling. . . . He has established himself as one of the leading poetic realists, painting his stories across the canvas of interiors: small-town America and the human heart." -San Jose Mercury News, on Orchard

Having survived the massacre aboard the doomed cruise ship Oceanus, all Dan Belamy wants is peace; a chance to go home and attempt to put his life - and his mind - back together. He's not going to get it. Dragged back to the UK by the remaining members of the Rennick family, Dan finds himself once more pitched into a nightmare. Vampires are rising, gathering in force for an assault on London which could blow the secret of their existence wide open, and Dan's captors are convinced that he alone holds the key to defeating them. Dan knows he has some strange connection with the creatures. Trouble is, as chaos erupts on the streets and the bodies begin to pile up around Dan, it looks like the vampires know it, too...

A barbed rebuttal to the conservative view that popular culture is destroying the English language.

Annotation St. Thomas, St. John, St. Croix are the major US Virgin Islands, and they are among the most popular destinations in the Caribbean. Johnny Sundown, full blooded Sioux warrior, Private Eye, working the streets of 1950's Chicago, is confronted with a deadly new case that threatens to rip the town apart. Someone is sending zombies on a killing spree, and Johnny must find out who before all hell breaks out.

Former Chicago police officer Johnny Sundown is just starting out on his new career as a private investigator, helping clean up the streets of the city in the wake of the Second World War. But he is different than others in his profession. He is a full-blooded Sioux, born the Dakota Badlands. He is the last Shadow Warrior, charged with protecting the world from those evils others can't even see. He is the sole surviving Power Wielder of the Anisazi School of Magic. And he is about to tackle his first case on his own. And if he fails the outcome may be to end not only his career, but the existence of the city itself. Because now he has to face not only a parade of monsters, pulled straight out of the movies and turned deadly real, but the cracking of the very fabric of the universe itself.

They call me Sundown; this is my life story. I was a miracle baby who grew up to become one of the longest active members and leader of one of the nation's bloodiest prison gangs and criminal organizations, La Nuestra Familia. It began inside the California prison walls and spread to the streets of California and America, the land of the free and the home of the brave and of bloody men like me who were baptized in the blood and fed from the table of bloody men, taught in the knowledge and ways of tried and proven warriors who have been to hell and back again. Home of murderers and thieves who dared to believe that we could become something and somebody, not just inside of California prison walls, but even reaching out into the very streets and society from which we had been sentenced to be forgotten by the rest of the world. But we were men who refused to be forgotten, and with the blood of our enemies, we would carve our names upon the pages of criminal history. And we did. I deserved to be crucified for the blood that stained my whole life and the crimes I've committed and the evil I had done. Like that one thief on the cross next to Jesus who found grace in God's eyes, God remembered me too, and now I am trying to live my life as an instrument of God's mercy to men who are as I used to be—murderers, thieves, and organized gangsters. This book was written raw, just as it was lived.

Our subject today, is "Showdown at Sundown." It takes place at the end of the week of Daniel. We are going to be dealing mainly with the short interval of time right in here, in the time leading up to the last week of Daniel, whatever length of time this is, and with what must take place, according to the Bible, in, and at the end of that last week of Daniel.

Upon his return home, Horace Daniels, a war veteran, finds himself struggling with trying to re-adapt to being back in his hometown. With the help of his family, friends and the new woman in his life he is able to bring things back into perspective. Shortly after settling in, he joins the County Sheriff's Department and becomes a deputy. With a strong sense of duty and purpose, Daniels and his fellow deputies stand to uphold justice and restore order. But when a new liquid drug hits the streets the crime rate and violence escalates throughout the city. This nearly pushes Horace over the edge as he is constantly being faced with verbal insults and physical threats. With the support of his department, Horace decides that it's time to use his combat skills to put an end to the madness and bring down the culprits involved. He called himself Johnny Sundown because his real name was difficult for anyone but a full blooded Sioux to pronounce. He was a private investigator in the mean streets of Chicago, Illinois during the 1950's, but his cases were special. He took on all those things no one else could confront: zombies, ghosts and other threats from the hidden other world. Johnny Sundown was the last Shadow Warrior, the last active magician who could stand against those unknown horrors. But he had fallen on his final case against the greatest threat the world had ever faced, and the universe should have moved on from that lost realm of power and wonder. Only it hadn't. Decades later that same threat has reared its head once more, and only the Shadow Warrior's long lost journal contained the secrets necessary to stand up to an evil that would destroy reality itself. Now a group of scientists is struggling to understand this ancient threat and desperate to locate the missing book. If they cannot, the Earth itself is doomed.

"Powerful and important . . . an instant classic." —The Washington Post Book World The award-winning look at an ugly aspect of American racism by the bestselling author of Lies My Teacher Told Me, reissued with a new preface by the author In this groundbreaking work, sociologist James W. Loewen, author of the classic bestseller Lies My Teacher Told Me, brings to light decades of hidden racial exclusion in America. In a provocative, sweeping analysis of American residential patterns, Loewen uncovers the thousands of "sundown towns"—almost exclusively white towns where it was an unspoken rule that blacks weren't welcome—that cropped up throughout the twentieth century, most of them located outside of the South. Written with Loewen's trademark honesty and thoroughness, Sundown Towns won the Gustavus Myers Outstanding Book Award, received starred reviews in Publishers Week- ly and Booklist, and launched a nationwide online effort to track down and catalog sundown towns across America. In a new preface, Loewen puts this history in the context of current controversies around white supremacy and the Black Lives Matter movement. He revisits sundown towns and finds the number way down, but with notable exceptions in exclusive all-white suburbs such as Kenilworth, Illinois, which as of 2010 had not a single black household. And, although many former sundown towns are now integrated, they often face "second-generation sundown town issues," such as in Ferguson, Missouri, a former sundown town that is now majority black, but with a majority-white police force.

The #1 New York Times bestselling author of Beautiful Tempest and Make Me Love You brings her "mastery of historical romance" (Entertainment Weekly) to 1880s Montana where passions and gold fever run high as an American heiress turns to a rugged mountain man to help her locate her father's fortune. After a social whirlwind in London, Violet Mitchell is summoned back to Philadelphia only to discover her family living on the edge of financial ruin while their father seeks new wealth in Montana's gold fields. With the family's home and social standing at risk, Violet makes a drastic decision. Meanwhile, Montana rancher Morgan Callahan rode away from his family's cattle farm to make his own fortune. Now as he finishes exploiting a mother lode of silver, a young woman claiming to be his late partner's daughter turns up wanting to be taken to her father's mine. Suspecting that the pretty schemer works for the mining outfit that is trying to steal his land, he has no qualms about snatching her and holding her at his camp where she can do no harm. But he underestimated the new thorn in his side. Determined to claim what rightfully belongs to her family, Violet summons up the courage and grit to cope with the hazards and discomforts of an untamed land and the disturbingly masculine stranger who holds her fate in his hands. But an error of judgment brings down a hailstorm of danger that upends her plans and deepens her bond to a man who may turn out to be all she desires. With her signature "strong characters, humor, interesting plots—and, of course—romance" (The Cincinnati Enquirer), Johanna Lindsey crafts another irresistible and adventurous love story. A showdown eight years in the making... Lone gunman Bret Manders is on his way to the frontier town of Sundown, with only one thing on his mind. Vengeance. The town of Sundown is in the iron grip of Darby Wicker. A sadistic power-hungry man, Wicker came west after the Confederates were defeated. By the time the Sundown folk realised what a snake he was, it was too late. He had his finger in every pie in town. Not only that, but he murdered the Sheriff in cold blood and appointed the cowardly Sheriff Veldon in his place. Turning his eye to the local ranches, he schemes to buy them all out and cement his monopoly on Sundown. He doesn't care much if they refuse him - he'll just burn their ranches to the ground. With Washington convinced the West has been tamed, Wicker knows the US army won't trouble him and the town will be powerless to stop him. But he doesn't count on Bret. Hellbent on revenge, Bret's been hunting Wicker for eight years - and it's personal. But even he can't believe how bad things are in Sundown. Sheriff Veldon is as yellow-bellied as they come, letting Wicker's murderous gunmen do as they please. In fact, the only person Bret trusts in Sundown is Fay Saunders - a singer at the Golden Ace Saloon. For some reason, she wants to see Wicker dead as much as Bret does. Meanwhile, despite Wicker's attacks on the ranchers, none of the ranches want to form an alliance of sort. It's a fine mess but Bret knows that if he gives the ranches and decent folk of Sundown some hope that Wicker can be driven away, they'd be on his side. And where better to start cleaning out Wicker's corruption than on The Streets of Sundown... A classic Western, The Streets of Sundown is a thrilling and gun-toting story.

No one else ever took a trip like this. Nearly 600 trips, actually. "But who cares," I thought, when first approached to edit the manuscript for this book "... about flying into every little airport in Indiana, then moving on to those in surrounding states?" Pilots? Perhaps. Even so ... I'm a writer, not a pilot. And Bob Hechlin is a pilot — not a writer. Except ... Bob has an insatiable curiosity about people, places, events, you name it. To him, an airport is more than a name or a spot on a map. He's a great listener. He has ears and eyes for detail — "nuggets" that many people either overlook or don't connect with other nuggets like dots on a page, to create picture after picture after picture. And Bob has a gift for gab. "Storytelling," if you will. So if you believe (as I do) that "writing is talking when you can't be there," give this book a listen. Hear things you never knew about John Dillinger, Al Capone, a WWII pilot named O'Hare ... back-road encounters on Mackinac Island and not flying under the bridge ... out-maneuvering storm clouds ... the Oshkosh air show ... close-knit neighborhoods with hangar-garages ... airports in Ohio ... police in Gary, Indiana ... the link between Northwestern University and a historic Lake Michigan passenger-ferry tragedy ... how a teenager's Happy Birthday flight launched a career ... and more. Much more. Some people read books from page 1; the opening line hooks them. Others check the ending first. ("If I like how it ends, I'll like getting there.") With 'Honey,' feel free to start in the middle; pick a page — any page. Chances are, you will quickly be drawn in and pulled onward from one mini-tale to the next. And at some point, you'll say "Geez, let's go back and read the rest!" I did. C'mon along for the ride. Bob makes even the shortest hop a fun trip. Richard E. Schingoethe While considerable attention has been given to encounters between black citizens and police in urban communities, there have been limited analyses of such encounters in suburban settings. Race, Place, and Suburban Policing tells the full story of social injustice, racialized policing, nationally profiled shootings, and the ambiguity of black life in a suburban context. Through compelling interviews, participant observation, and field notes from a marginalized black enclave located in a predominantly white suburb, Andrea S. Boyles examines a fraught police-citizen interface, where blacks are segregated and yet forced to negotiate overlapping spaces with their more affluent white counterparts.

The idea of "The Green Book" is to give the Motorist and Tourist a Guide not only of the Hotels and Tourist Homes in all of the large cities, but other classifications that will be found useful wherever he may be. Also facts and information that the Negro Motorist can use and depend upon. There are thousands of places that the public doesn't know about and aren't listed. Perhaps you know of some? If so send in their names and addresses and the kind of business, so that we might pass it along to the rest of your fellow Motorists. You will find it handy on your travels, whether at home or in some other state, and is up to date. Each year we are compiling new lists as some of these places move, or go out of business and new business places are started giving added employment to members of our race.

Over ten years ago, the city of Korvosa suffered under the rule of the tyrannical Queen Ileosa. The city has recovered from her rule, but now people are seeing her ghost appearing after dark in places where her cruelty hit particularly hard. Can you unravel the truth about this latest threat to the city before it's too late? "Shadows at Sundown" is a Pathfinder adventure for 11th-level characters. Featuring the potential return of several classic villains, an extensive investigation of a supernatural mystery, and several dangerous locations to explore, this adventure is ready to give your group the chance to save the city of Korvosa from some of its most notorious dangers--or the chance for the heroes to see their final sunset!

Judd Miller and his brother work to start a small ranch outside the town of Red Bluffs. But other interests in their valuable property lead to the powerful mayor of the town, working with other crooked officials, to fleece the brothers of their deeded ground, culminating in the killing of Judd's brother, Randall. Unknown to Judd, the transcontinental railroad is coming through, with an interest in buying his property to shorten their route through the mountains. Judd flees attempts to kill him, turning instead to a gunfighter to avenge Randall's death, while exposing the men who conspired against him. Can a young widow and a reformed preacher be enough to battle and beat the odds?
